however, surgical removal of the inlet patch is effective, in stopping this under-estimated, under-recognized type of lpr.

while government forces possess the technology and launchers required to load and fire these devices, there is no evidence to suggest that opposition groups do